Misogyny in Higher Education

Professor David will present the theme of her two recently published, complementary books:

Reclaiming Feminism: Challenging Everyday Misogyny (Bristol: Policy Press, 2016) is a memoir of being an academic and activist. She reflects on changes in the global, neo-liberal academy and how feminism is now everywhere and nowhere influential. Professor David focuses especially on recent changes on campus about sexual abuse and harassment.

A Feminist Manifesto for Education (Cambridge: Polity Press, 2016) focuses on Professor David's EU-funded research on sexual violence in the context of changing international policies and practices. How to educate and train professionals within higher education to challenge gender-related violence amongst children and young people was our key focus. What does this tell us about transforming sex and relationships education for the future?
