Informal and non-formal education and learning in an immigrant workers centre

Forms of community-based labour organising outside of traditional trade union models - such as workers’ centres - are rich sites of education and knowledge production in which both non-formal learning (e.g. workshops, language classes and leadership development programmes) and informal learning (often incidentally, in the course of campaigns and struggle) happens.

In this seminar, Dr Choudry will discuss the informal and non-formal learning and education which occur in the organising practices of the Immigrant Workers Centre (IWC) in Montreal, Canada.
