Understanding and Conducting Practice Research: Lessons from a Nordic context

Ilse Julkunen is Professor of Practice Research in Social Work at the University of Helsinki, Finland, and Director of the Mathilda Wrede Institute - a practice-research unit at the intersection of social work education, research and practice - operating in close cooperation with the Centre of Expertise within the social services.

Professor Julkunen has been a Guest Professor at Linnaeus University in Sweden and has extensive Nordic collaborative networks on knowledge development in practice.

This seminar will provide a space to hear about Nordic experiences of practice research, and the challenges and opportunities that arise in practice research collaborations in diverse national contexts.
