How China is Reshaping the Global Economy: Development Impacts in Africa and Latin America

Professor Rhys Jenkins
University of East Anglia

China’s growing economic involvement in Sub-Saharan Africa and Latin America has been a source of major controversy. Does it provide mutual benefits and a good example of South-South cooperation? Or do the benefits accrue unequally to China and a few local elites, at significant economic, political and environmental costs?

Rhys Jenkins is Professor of Development Economics at the School of International Development, University of East Anglia. Norwich. He has spent more than a decade researching China’s impact on the Global South and published articles on China’s involvement in Latin America and in Africa in journals including World Development, the Journal of Development Studies, Third World Quarterly, Latin American Perspectives, and the Journal of Asian Economies.
