- Congrats to Global Studies academics Lyndsay McLean & Demet Dinler for the Sussex Spirit Award they received at The Education Awards ceremony. The Award encompasses the five core values of kindness, integrity, inclusion, collaboration and courage, within the context of teaching and learning at Sussex. Winners demonstrably put into practice at least one of these values.
- Congrats to Paul Statham whose article 'Unintended transnationalism': The challenging lives of Thai women who partner Western men', in Population Space and Place, is among their top-10 most downloaded papers!
- Rising with the Tide: Making a Killing: Big Environmental NGO's \(BINGOs\), Conservation & Green Violence with Paul Gilbert
- The SSRP Financial Crises and Environmental Sustainability project led by A. Antoniadou and A. Antonarakis are introducing their new UG Research Interns Charis Davis and Agata Jarmicka. During their fellowship, Agata and Charis will be based in the Centre for Global Political Economy and will analyse a large body of IMF speeches, publications and financial support programmes, to trace and analyse the evolution of the IMF's discourse on environmental sustainability, and the gap between this discourse and actual IMF policies on the ground. For this project, Charis was awarded a Sussex Junior Research Associate fellowship, and Agata an Assistant Research Analyst FCES fellowship.

Agata Jarmicka is an Economics and International Development student. She has been involved in setting up the Sussex Nightline, a confidential listening service that offers anonymous help to students. Her research interests include gender in development and environment protection.

Charis Davis is an International Relations and Development student. She volunteers at the student-led Food Waste Cafe, a sustainable food redistribution project that raises money for charity. Her research interests include the relationship between environmentalism and capitalism, alongside how slow and structural forms of violence interlink with the environment.
