Temporary Teaching Appointments

Arrangements and procedures for making temporary appointments should as far as possible follow those for permanent appointments. The varied character and timing of such appointments, however, make it inconvenient to establish firm rules, and the Vice-Chancellor may therefore relax the normal requirements in relation to advertisement, consultations, and the composition and procedures of appointing committees - always provided that no less than three permanent members of the academic faculty are formally designated to recommend the appointment to the Vice-Chancellor (or an officer delegated authority to act upon the appointment by the Vice-Chancellor).
